IN GASTRO-INTESTINAL DISORDERS

In such conditions it is a primary consideration that the food should be light and unirritating. In gastric and duodenal ulceration and in the dyspepsias, Allenburys Beef Juice may safely and advantageously be given, where beef tea would often increase the pain and have a harmful effect. Because of its high protein content, it provides a valuable means of keeping up a patient's strength.

In bottles at 2 - and 3 6 each.

Antiphlogistine
TRADE MARK

AS A FIRST AID

For those common instances of minor burns and skin irritations, ANTIPHLOGISTINE—applied at room temperature (not heated)—is an effective Medicated Dressing.

ANTIPHLOGISTINE acts as a protective, soothing covering. Helps prevent secondary infections. It absorbs products of inflammation, stops itching and removes crusts and scales. In the case of minor burns an ANTIPHLOGISTINE pack relieves pain and helps prevent blistering.

A Famous Surgeon writes...

"It would be desirable to have all laxatives as reliable and dependable as Medilax"

The reliability of "Medilax" appeals particularly to the Nurse. It relieves her of the anxiety inseparable from cases where difficulty is experienced in securing the regular movement of the patient's bowels, so essential to healthful progress. Containing seven ingredients, in proportions determined by research and clinical experience. "Medilax" is the medical idea of a laxative. It ensures prompt and efficient evacuation by gently stimulating the peristaltic reflex and softening the faeces; and exerts a tonic influence over kidneys and intestines which assists natural functioning. what MILTON is . . .

1. THE UNIQUE HYPOCHLORITE★

Milton is unique. It is the only electrolytic sodium hypochlorite which is specially stabilised. It is non-irritant. It retains its strength for several years. This claim cannot be made for any other hypochlorite.

This unique stability of Milton makes it valuable in medical and surgical practice. Partly because of their variability and rapid loss of strength, Dakin's Solution, Eusol and all other hypochlorites can never form efficient substitutes and may even cause harm.

For stability and ease of preparation the choice is Milton—not any hypochlorite.

The principle behind

Wright's Coal Tar Soap

In Liquor Carbonis Detergens the antiseptic and antipruritic agents in Coal Tar were isolated for the first time from the inert residuum of substances lacking therapeutic value, and the preparation has been used and recommended by skin specialists for over 80 years.

It naturally followed that Liquor Carbonis Detergens was included in the basic formula of Wright's Coal Tar Soap. This powerful antiseptic principle gave the soap a character and value exclusively its own without the slightest risk of harshness to the skin. Wrights, in fact, is specially soothing and particularly thorough in its cleansing.

Nursing Times

VOL. XL. No. 32 SATURDAY, AUGUST 5, 1944

EDITOR: MISS K. F. ARMSTRONG, S.R.N., S.C.M., DIPLOMA IN NURSING, LONDON UNIVERSITY

The Voice of the Community

THE nursing world will welcome the leaflet on 'Nurses' Representative Councils,' which the Royal College of Nursing and the British Hospitals Association have issued. It was prepared by a liaison committee set up by these two organizations, and it is obtainable from either body (price 1s. 9d. for six copies, 3s. for twelve copies, post free). Nurses' representative councils exist in comparatively few hospitals, but wherever they do exist they have proved invaluable in promoting the well-being and efficiency of the hospital. They have the full backing of the Athlone and Inter-Departmental Committee on Nursing Services, which was set up in 1938 to consider nursing problems, because of the shortage of candidates for nursing—a shortage not due to any decrease in the number of entrants, but the result of the constant increase in the demand produced by the continuous expansion of the national health services.

Why is there a need for such councils? The reason is that they serve as a channel for the expression of opinion and the free discussion of matters which members of the staff wish to bring up. In community life there must be certain rules and regulations to enable the communal life to run smoothly, to ensure the greatest good of the greatest number. No individual can do just as she wishes when and as she wants. Each must consider her neighbours and colleagues, both on duty and in her free time. The individual who plays a gramophone or switches on a loud wireless set is either an asset or a nuisance, according to the time and place at which she does it. The purpose of the nurses' representative council, however, is visualized on much broader lines: to cover the whole professional life of the nurse. Student nurses may be able to make constructive suggestions on the planning of the time-table, and, on the other hand, they can learn, impersonally, round the council table, why the hospital authorities make certain arrangements, such as transferring nurses for a given period, to another hospital.

In the past it was usual for all rules and regulations to be drawn up by those in authority and imposed on those who worked under that authority, but this form of discipline is no longer accepted as the best. The modern concept is that self-discipline is the ideal. The individual should not merely be told that she must do this or that, but should discuss the matter, see the need for co-operation and contribute her ideas as to how that co-operation can best be achieved. Everyone will not agree, but the opinion of the majority must be the basis of action, though the majority is not necessarily right.

That is the idea behind the nurses' representative council. Each section of the staff—first year, second year, third year, fourth year nurses, staff nurses and sisters—have their representatives elected by their own section. The representatives express not necessarily their own opinions, but the opinions of the section they represent. Each section may send recommendations to the council for discussion, and all recommendations accepted by the council as a whole are sent to the matron. Many are likely to prove trivial matters which she can deal with easily. Some she will probably be unable to deal with to the satisfaction of the committee. These the nurses' representative council, the pamphlet suggests, shall be at liberty to send through the matron to the nursing committee or other appropriate committee of the hospital. For example, the matron, through improved organization, could see that nurses had plenty of warning about their free time and holiday dates, but she would need an increase of staff to shorten hours of duty in all probability.

The suggested composition of the council is three representatives of first-year nurses, three representatives of second-year nurses, four representatives of administrative, ward and departmental nurses: if there are also assistant nurses on the staff, a representation of one to every twenty is suggested, with representation of the Civil Nursing Reserve, as a war-time measure, on the same basis. The pamphlet states that this representation is designed for a hospital of 300 to 700 beds, and points out that some reduction of the numbers in each group may be desirable for smaller hospitals. These figures are, we would point out, only a suggested basis, and may need modification: for example, where large numbers of Civil Nursing Reserve, in the categories of assistant nurse and nursing auxiliary, are employed, the ratio of one representative to twenty members might give them a much lighter representation than the nurses in training would have: a 700-bedded hospital might well have 100 or more nurses in the first year, so that the ratio of representation would be one to 30 or 40 student nurses. A similar ratio would be suitable for nursing auxiliaries in such circumstances.

The problem of whether the matron should, or should not, be a member of the council is the point which is most likely to arouse interest. The committee has decided that she should not be, and that she should not attend its meetings, though she should have the right to request the council to consider any matters she may care to send to it. The liaison committee states that it has reached this conclusion because it felt that 'on balance the presence of matrons at council meetings must have a restrictive effect.' However, the committee states that it is not its intention to interfere with the arrangements of councils already set up, and functioning satisfactorily, and it acknowledges that matrons have co-operated successfully with their nursing staff on such councils.

There is much to be said on either side. The exclusion of the matron from the council appears to stress her position as the employer of nurses, as against her position as the head and leader of an educational establishment. She has, of course, a dual function in every hospital that is a training school for nurses. She has to think of the good of the patients, and the hospital as a whole, as well as of her nurses; so, of course, must the nurses' representative council.

However, the suggestions in this pamphlet are suggestions only, and not binding. We do hope that, though they may not be followed to the letter, they will promote the setting up of nurses' councils in all hospitals; for by means of such councils all minor, and many of the major grievances of hospital life can be smoothed out—a very necessary step towards improved recruitment into the nursing profession.

Topical Notes

The Minister's Message

THE Minister of Health, Mr. Henry Willink, asks us to convey the following message to the hospitals of the country :— 'I have been much impressed during the past few weeks by the smooth efficiency with which the hospitals and casualty services of the Emergency scheme have carried out their duties. These have included the reception, transport and treatment of casualties arriving in this country from the battle area in Western Europe and of civilians injured by the flying bombs, in addition to the casualties arriving from other theatres of war and the various other categories of patients for whom the Emergency Medical Services are responsible. This reflects the utmost credit on the medical, nursing and other staffs, and also on the administrative officers. Many of them have carried out their duties as mobile surgical teams and reinforcements under difficult circumstances, while others have shouldered heavy extra burdens in order that these reinforcements might be released for service where they were most required. The country owes a deep debt of gratitude to all members of hospital staffs for contributing so much in this, and other ways, to the success of the Emergency Hospital Scheme during this important phase of the war. The signal service they have given and the public spirit they have shown, often under conditions of difficulty, are especially gratifying to me as Minister of Health. I am most grateful to all concerned.' It is always good to be appreciated.

Out of the Skies

ONCE again we extend our sympathies to hospital staffs and their patients who have been victims of flying-bomb attacks. In a recent raid one hospital in Southern England, where a set of quads recently saw the light of day, received a direct hit; chemical supplies caught alight and soon two blocks were blazing. Nurses rushed to the rescue, many of them only in dressing gowns, to help to carry the patients to safety; and, as the main staircase was ablaze, the only way out was by the fire escape—the use of stretchers, even for the seriously ill patients, was out of the question. Two patients lost their lives and one 20-year-old student nurse, Miss Crouch, after she had run up and down the fire escape several times, was eventually trapped by falling debris. A second hospital, too, in another area, was seriously damaged by fire and seven patients lost their lives under the ruins. Many blind patients, however, and old people were led through smoke, fire and falling masonry to safety. Further courage in the nursing world is exemplified by a midwife in a South-East coast town who, summoned by an urgent telephone call to her patient, went on her way, with her face cut by glass from the effect of blast, bringing twins into the world.

UNRRA Plans

As the Allied armies advance to liberate more and more European territory the plans of UNRRA develop accordingly; for this is the organization that will follow in the wake of the victorious armies. In the Balkan area, the headquarters of the three Balkan missions, Yugoslavia, Greece and Albania, is practically complete. The Army doctors and nurses are working in complete harmony with UNRRA as one unit, and they will go into the countries together. Emergency units are now ready to send where they are needed and these contain drugs and surgical equipment to meet the estimated requirements of 100,000 people for one month. In addition, the unit contains one hospital of 200 beds with operating theatres and X-ray apparatus; also five 40-bedded hospitals to act as cottage hospitals in the country districts. The policy of UNRRA is, at all times, to co-operate with the people of the individual country, and, to further this end, UNRRA has set up a central epidemological bureau to which all countries will send information about epidemics which will be collated.

The Tuberculous Household—

BEFORE the recent institution of the Ministry of Health maintenance allowances for those tuberculous persons who have a prospect of returning to normal work, 40 per cent. of 662 households, containing an unemployed tuberculous person, had not sufficient money available each week to buy their appropriate rations and priority foods. The maintenance allowance has reduced the number to 11 per cent. These figures have been estimated by the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis and the Committee for the Study of Social Medicine, and are contained with much else of interest in a 3s. report of the results of enquiries into the income and expenditure on food in tuberculous households in war-time. Before the institution of the maintenance allowance, 63 per cent. of families, containing a tuberculous patient and three children, were unable to purchase a standard diet. The allowances should go a long way to improve such conditions.

we must hope for them to go further in the future. For people who are in close contact with a tuberculous patient, to eat a standard diet is foolish. Whether the tuberculosis officer thinks the patient has a prospect of returning to normal work is not so important from the national point of view as would appear at first sight. Of equal importance is to prevent the members of the households of tuberculous persons becoming further casualties of the tubercle bacillus, and the finest protection is a fully adequate diet.

—and Employment

Of the 1,346 patients surveyed, 51 per cent. were unemployed, and of these 95 per cent. were out of work because of their tuberculosis. These figures correspond closely to those in the report of the medical director, J. B. McDougall, C.B.E., M.D., of Preston Hall, British Legion Village: 109 patients returned home during the year ending September 30, 1943, unfit for work; 110 fit for work (84 for light work, 26 for full work). In the spring of 1943 the Council of Management of Preston Hall, which is for ex-service men, acquired Nayland Sanatorium, Colchester, for service and ex-service women. Run on similar lines to Preston Hall, it has already proved its value. Of the 223 discharged during the year under review, 113 were improved and 37 quiescent.

Orphans from the Storm

The question of children's homes and the need for reformed methods has again come into the limelight with the demand of Lady Allen of Hurtwood for an investigation. In a letter to The Times Mr. John Moss, Public Assistance Officer for Kent, supports her plea, stating that many homes, both those run by voluntary bodies and municipal hospitals are out of date in buildings, equipment and management. In many homes, too, he continued, domestic service was the only career offered to the girls, although there were notable exceptions where both boys and girls were trained for many forms of employment. One of the main needs, too, was to house the children in smaller units and, as a matter of post-war policy, the Kent County Council was not re-opening one of its residential homes for children to attain this end. In the past, he concluded, one of the greatest difficulties had been, also, to find the right people to put in charge, and too much had been expected of them: heavy domestic work, sometimes all the cooking; their salaries, too, had often been inadequate. For the future, suitable women might, he felt, be found among those who had taken the senior child care reserve course for work in war nurseries. A sound idea which, we feel, might do much for the child condemned to grow up in an institution through no fault of his own.

Efficiency or Affection

Apropos of Lady Allen's letter, too, that faithful champion of rebellion, Mr. George Bernard Shaw, adds his quota on the vexed question of children's homes. In a further letter to The Times he compares the Kaiserin Augusta's House in pre-war Berlin where, in perfect surroundings, trained nurses cared for the children with such clockwork precision and efficiency that each nurse knew how many minutes to the hour she could devote to each child—with the children in the Connemara cabins, often living in dirt on entirely the wrong food—but loved and petted. Yet, in Berlin, the children died like flies and in Connemara the mortality rate was nil. In the view of an American judge, Henry Neill, Mr. Shaw continued, this difference in living was due to the lack of affection received by the German children; the Connemara child might grow up to be something of a savage, but the Berlin child, brought up on the gospel of efficiency, grew up as we now know the German or did not survive. Mr. Shaw suggests that, for a blending of the two extremes, that: "The trained nurse with no time to spare for cuddling must be supplemented by affectionate masseuses. Have we not enough motherly and grandmotherly women, married or unmarried, maids or widows, to volunteer for this service before and after they have reared their own children?" In this, the machine age, has he perhaps hit the nail on the head, and yet, where all work is concerned, should it not be possible to combine scientific knowledge and efficiency with a kind heart?

A Nurse at SHAEF

Lieut. Stone at her desk

An American Army nurse, First-Lieutenant M. J. Stone, has been appointed nursing consultant to the chief of the public health branch of the G5 (Civil Affairs) Division of SHAEF (Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force). As the aim of the Division is to assist military operations and to promote Allied victory by contributing to the re-establishment of orderly civilian life in the liberated areas, Lieut. Stone's work will be to advise, in co-operation with the chief of the public health branch, on how public health nursing can contribute to the success of the Division. Accordingly, her activities will cover the preparation of policy concerning public health nursing, and the review of information from the battlefield, using such information as a basis for developing a public health service. Another side of her work is to maintain liaison with the nursing profession in the Allied forces, in the British War Office and the United States War Department, in the Ministry of Health and in the United States Public Health Service; also in the civilian public health agencies within the liberated areas.

Training for the Job

Lieutenant Stone has a Bachelor of Arts degree, and she trained at the Holzer Hospital, Ohio. For a time she was a director of the school of nursing at Huntington Memorial Hospital, and in 1937 and 1938, during the river floods in West Virginia, she was in charge of the Red Cross Emergency Hospital in Huntington. Her wide experience in public health includes instructorships at the West Virginia public health training centre, and at a similar training centre in Alabama. She also holds the Master's degree in Public Health of Columbia University. In 1943, she joined the Army Nurse Corps.

Defeating the Mud

District nurses living in the country, whose work takes them, at any hour of the day or night and in all weathers, over hill and dale, will be glad to hear that the Queen's Institute of District Nursing has a limited number of rubber boots available for nurses working in rural areas. All applications should be made to the general superintendent, the Queen's Institute of District Nursing, 57 Lower Belgrave Street, London, S.W.1. Letters must state the size required, the type of district where the nurse is stationed and the mode of transport which she uses.

EARLY SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS OF NERVOUS AND MENTAL DISORDERS—Part I.*

By J. FRANK, M.D. (Prague)

The psychological effect of total war on the rising generation is still an unknown quantity. Young evacuees leave the security of family life for a new, and strange, environment.

IN all the different branches of medicine it has become increasingly apparent that the emphasis of curative effort must shift from the treatment of established disease to prevention or early recognition.

The 'Cinderella' of scientific medicine, psychiatry, has suffered from many handicaps and is still, as it were, in the stage of 'growing pains.' As far as therapy is concerned psychiatry has been a 'no man's land.' A bleak apathy has prevailed in mental hospitals and, consequently, the public has continued to have an almost mediaeval prejudice against them.

The vexed question of the classification of mental disorders and psycho-physical correlation has made diagnostic criteria vague and early diagnosis almost impossible. The advent of such treatments as fever, shock, prolonged narcosis and prefrontal leucotomy, on the physical side, and psycho-analysis, narco-analysis, occupational treatment, and other achievements on the psychological side, has brought about a radical change in the diagnosis, treatment and prognosis of mental illnesses. These treatments brought into sharp relief the fact that the duration of any mental illness has paramount prognostic significance: the longer a mental disease has lasted the worse are the chances of recovery, quite regardless of the form of treatment. If we consider, also, the immense social implications of chronic mental breakdown for family and community the importance of prevention appears enormous.

The Incidence and Cost

A report of the Board of Control for England and Wales stated that, in January, 1938, the number of notified insane persons under care was 157,353, and that the total expenditure in connection with them then exceeded £9,000,000 (Henderson and Gillespie). These figures do not include insane persons maintained in poor law institutions. I have not got the present statistics at hand, but it is safe to assume that they are not more encouraging, despite the fact that the incidence of major endogenous psychosis is not influenced by war. It is difficult to obtain valid statistics about the incidence of psychoneurosis, psychopathic personality disorders, and the so-called not certifiable 'border-line' cases of social misfits; the black sheep, who are the haunting menace of family and community and nightmare of the general practitioner's consulting room. The individual and collective misery which they cause is, alas, too apparent; it is almost superfluous to stress the importance of trying to tackle these cases before the maladjustment is so firmly conditioned that neither gaol nor mental hospital is of any avail. The number of these cases, and of psychoneurotics classified under different diagnostic labels and plied with numerous bottles of medicine, is, I am sure, colossal.

I would like here to issue a warning without, however, causing despondency and alarm. Although total war has not caused any appreciable increase in the number of cases of psychosis or psychoneurosis, we are quite unable as yet to assess the possible late psycho-pathological sequels of total war. The unavoidable scattering of families by evacuation, the absence of both parents on war duties, will certainly have some effects on the personality of the coming generation. The increasing problem of juvenile delinquency already serves as a 'writing on the wall' to warn us against taking the effect of total war on children lightheartedly.

An attempt to investigate early manifestations of mental illness needs the help of some classification, without which, in view of the infinite variety of symptoms, differentiation is impossible. At the same time, I should like to ask you not to take the classifying categories too rigidly, and to bear in mind that the human personality is a unique revelation, and, accordingly, its disorders ought not to be put into water-tight compartments.

In every mental trouble, generally speaking and for our practical purpose, we can discern two complementary parts—an endogenous or constitutional part, and an exogenous or environmental one. The more constitutional endogenous 'loading' of the personality there is the less environmental upset or pathogenic experience is necessary to cause a mental or neurotic breakdown and vice versa. There are limits of endurance, however, and certain experiences are capable of drawing out severe neurotic and even psychotic (confusional) states in constitutionally perfectly balanced persons. For example, the state of being trapped, buried for more than two hours, has caused ideally adjusted personalities to develop more or less severe neurotic symptoms. It seems, therefore, that 'traumatic neurosis' exists. At the same time the undeniable tenet of Freud that no psychoneurosis exists in adults without infantile neurosis receives final confirmation, if that were necessary, in this war.

The Effects of Blast

The traumatic neurosis caused by blast or other sudden violent external experience is a good example to demonstrate the value of early disposal and treatment without delay. The symptoms are common knowledge: disturbances of consciousness of varying severity, acute purposeless motor-restlessness, unconscious flight into the 'mimicry of death' or stupor states, and the whole spectrum of hysteria-like manifestations, are the main features. The dreams of these patients are important: the sleep-disturbing recapitulation-compulsion, as Freud called it, in the recurrent dreams of the traumatic situation, in the form of nightmares, unfinished actions—for example, trying to get somewhere or do something and unable to do so, or some very aggressive dream contents, have differential diagnostic significance. If dreams are entirely lacking, but amnesia and other neurosis-like symptoms are present, one should be suspicious that an organic brain damage after concussion or contusion may be complicating the psychogenic structure. An electro-encephalographic examination is of very great help in differential diagnosis. The prevention of chronicity in all traumatic cases depends on the speed of recovery nition and disposal. The less severe cases need only steadying reassurance and rest for a day or two to enable them to re-assume normal activities. The severe cases react very favourably indeed to the treatment of lifting of amnesia by means of narco-analysis or induced mild hypoglycaemia—using in the latter case the state of better emotional amenability and pliability for psychotherapy and abreaction.

It is essential that all these cases should come as early as possible under expert management in a psychiatric unit. Here I should mention the vital influence of compensation on psychological casualties. Delay in the award of compensation, or an award on an income basis, makes the prognosis immeasurably worse. This is also the case if the trauma acted as a catalyst, or a pull on a trigger, as it were, in a previously unbalanced or psychoneurotic personality.

The psycho-analytical school, according to Freud's teaching, distinguishes between character and symptom-neurosis. Both are determined by early childhood experiences, the former is much more difficult to treat and responds less well to therapeutic efforts.

If I describe briefly, say, a compulsory character you will readily appreciate the difference. Such a person seems to be emotionally rather dried up, rigid and over-conscientious, meticulous in every triviality of life, and under the bondage of schemes and schedules, stereotyped, over-punctual, and puritan in habits. He is a miser in financial matters, and apt to use a time-table or some schedule in his sex life, too. The air of grimness, the coldness of a crypt hangs around him and makes him seem incapable of loving anybody. In short, he is a type of mathematical school master succeeding, owing to his character anomalies, in inciting hatred and ignorance of mathematics in 99 per cent. of his pupils. A compulsory character also inclines to over-emphasize the importance of his bowel actions, and to terrorize wife and family with this subject. A compulsory neurosis, on the other hand, with paralysing symptoms of rituals, ceremonials and ruminations, is a very well-known clinical entity.

A Case in Point

In order to illustrate the grave and decisive influence of childhood experiences in originating obsessive neurotic illness of both types, I will describe a case. She was a patient of mine in Prague, a lady of great culture and more than average intelligence. Her main symptoms centred around the obsession that she might lose a needle or drop a knife, inadvertently, somewhere, and cause an accident. She particularly dreaded the idea of losing anything sharp in the streets, having the obsessive fear of causing a terrible car accident. She thought out a most elaborate system of ceremonials to be safe, but the ' taboos ' which she had to think out and impose on herself engulfed her more and more. When I was called in she was in a pseudo-stuporose state. She did not dare to move because she had so many thoughts and ceremonials to finish before moving, in order to safeguard against losing a needle or picking up and then dropping a knife. I think the main points of her childhood history—derived from free associations and dream analysis—typically show the relevant conflicts conducive to that form of neurosis.

The Father's Influence

She was the only daughter of a rather severe, patronizing father who was a judge, and, in a sense, a veritable house-tyrant. Her mother died when the patient was two years old: The rigid and emotionally frigid judge had one foible, his daughter. His attitude to her alternated between inflexible discipline and molly-coddling. He was particularly anxious about her physical well-being, and personally supervised and watched her meals and digestion. Every slight irregularity in that sphere caused the administration of torturing enemas and laxatives. The main features of her infantile neurosis between the age of two and five were extreme fastidiousnesses, coupled with greediness in matters of food, and a grave phobia about horses. Her analysis revealed that all the important, central, unconscious conflict in her adult neurosis was in ambivalent (love and hatred at once) attitude towards her own family; she married late in life. That ambivalence resulted from an anal-sadistic instinctual pattern which, of course, was the direct corollery of her childhood and father fixation. The unconscious death wishes and sadistic urges primarily directed against the father, and mixed up with tender feelings of love for him, were transferred later to her own family; they were repressed because they were intolerable for this sublime

For traumatic neurosis by the Pentothal treatment a state of drowsiness is induced by an intra-venous anaesthetic. The patient is persuaded to talk freely about his experiences and relieve his mind of worries and sensitive personality. The compulsory symptoms were the outcome of that rift; they partly represented the return of the repressed (the knife and other sharp objects) and served, at the same time, as a defence against the realization of it. By the self-punishing nature of the symptoms they also gratified a rigid inexorable super-ego (the judge).

The reason for reporting this case in some detail is to stress that, if her infantile neurosis had been recognized by the family doctor, and she had been sent to an expert child-analyst, all the ensuing misfortune for her and her family could have been avoided. Although the infantile neurosis needs very expert treatment, it can be treated in much less time, and treatment achieves far better results than in the case of adult neurosis. The method used is that of play-analysis. It is commonsense that treatment is more promising before the functional and instinctual, emotional pattern is fixed. In patients over forty-five years of age psychotherapy is very rarely successful, the mind having lost the elasticity necessary for a new adjustment. There is no doubt whatsoever that the foundations of our personality, instinctual and emotional qualities with far-reaching determining effect on the character and adjustment in life, are laid in pre-school age.

DOCTOR OF TANGANYIKA.—By Paul White (Published by George M. Dash Chartres House, 309 George St., Sydney, Australia. Obtainable in England from the Church Missionary Society., Salisbury Square, London E.C.4.; price 6s.)

Nurses who have lived or travelled in ' darkest Africa ' will find that Dr. White's account of his work and life at the mission hospital of Mvumi, Tanganyika, brings back the scents, sounds and mystery of that elusive continent; for the author is artist as well as doctor. The reader feels that he is standing at the surgeon's side as he operates on cataracts, fights the endless struggle against superstitution, outwits the witch doctor, and teaches mothercraft.

Throughout all his work Dr. White's faith never falters, and, by his surgical skill and his understanding of the African people, he builds up a hospital and a health service run, in part, by native workers. ' Doctor in Tanganyika ' gives, in fact, an insight into nursing overseas which nurses who plan to join any of the colonial nursing services, or to work in the Dominions, will find a fount of knowledge and a source of inspiration.

UNDULANT FEVER

By W. E. COOKE, F.R.C.S.I, L.R.C.P.

UNDULANT fever is a long-drawn-out illness characterized by bouts of fever, followed by remissions which give the temperature chart an undulating appearance. There is sweating and flitting joint pains. The disease is caused by a minute germ, formerly called the Micrococcus melitensis and now called Brucella melitensis. It is usually contracted by drinking infected goat's milk or by handling goats. At one time it was the cause of much illness among people visiting Malta, hence its former name—Malta fever. It is found in the Mediterranean area, Sudan, Somaliland, South Africa, India, China, Hong-Kong, the United States of America, Mexico, South America and the West Indies; it has occurred in Nigeria and Uganda.

Another form of the disease, due to Brucella abortus, is a cattle disease, but communicable to man in the milk and butter from infected herds. It occurs in the British Isles, Europe, America and elsewhere. It is known as abortus fever and is indistinguishable clinically from undulant fever. The attacks probably tend to be less long in duration but the treatment and nursing are the same. Both fevers are grouped under the name brucellosis. Young adults are the most susceptible; children and old people less so. Dry and hot seasons favour the spread of the disease.

Symptoms

After an incubation period of from five to twenty-one days, the onset is insidious, resembling that of typhoid fever. Headaches, insomnia, malaise, anorexia, and constipation with slight rise in temperature, will be noted. Epistaxis, slight bronchitis with a cough, body pains and weakness may occur. The temperature gradually mounts, with slight remissions in the evenings when sweating may become profuse. At the height of the fever delirium may occur. After rising in a step-like fashion for three or four days, the temperature falls in a similar fashion to reach normal about the tenth day.

Pathological Changes

The spleen and the liver become enlarged and, at times, the lymphatic glands. Aching in the bones and lumbar region may be severe. In fact, any joint may become swollen, inflamed and painful but this condition is usually transient, abating in about 24 hours, only to reappear later in some other joint. The hip, knee, shoulder, ankle and wrist joints are the most frequently involved; neuralgia of various nerves occurs. Orchitis and albuminuria may be present. The febrile waves follow each other at short intervals. During these remissions the patient feels better, but the night sweats and emaciation continue. There is no rash.

In mild attacks, the number of fever bouts may be very few, but, in others, the disease may continue for three or more months or even a year. It will then be a very debilitating illness causing anaemia, insomnia, mental depression, weakness, palpitation and rapid and irregular pulse. Ultimate recovery is the rule, but fatally severe cases sometimes occur. Mortality rate is about two to nine per cent.

Complications

Complications may include arthritis, phlebitis, orchitis, neuralgia, pulmonary conditions, such as broncho-pneumonia and bronchitis, myocarditis, thrombosis, haematuria, melaena, iri amenorrhoea and abortion. Diagnosis is made certain agglutination tests or by blood culture; an intra-dermal test also recently been used.

Treatment

The nursing of patients with undulant fever is on similar li to that required for those with typhoid fever which this dise resembles at its onset. Diet, however, can be more liberal a in intervals between the fever periods, generous. During fever period, diet is restricted to fluids, boiled milk, milky foo jellies, lemonade, glucose water and barley water. Later li juice should be given to avoid scurvy. In the intervals diet m consist of chicken, fish, fruit, vegetables, eggs and in fact a thing which is light, nourishing and tempting to the patie The doctor may order stimulants as the illness progresses.

It is important to remember that the patient's utensils sho be kept separate for the saliva, urine and stools are all infecti Precautions should be taken to prevent the food of other patien or of the nurse herself becoming contaminated by dirty han unclean cups and vessels, flies or dust. All excreta must disinfected before disposal.

Special Nursing Points

The patient should be nursed in bed during the fever wav After profuse sweats he should be dried with a warm towel, ha his clothes changed and be made comfortable. He should sponged if his temperature exceeds 103° F., and cold packs ice sponging given when the temperature does not yield to sim sponging. Laxatives, suppositories and enemata may be need for constipation. Antiphlogistine, hot fomentations or poulti will relieve joint pains.

No Specific Cure

No drug has any specific action on this disease. Car tonics are often required and, owing to cardiac weakness, aspi and phenacetin are not always safe. Depressing drugs harmful and, in using drugs to induce sleep, it should be remember that with these patients the risk of inducing drug habits is m greater than with other fever patients. Sulphanilamides some cases appear to have shortened the duration of the illes Sulphapyridine, M. and B. 693, g. 4 to 9 daily, for course four to five days each, has been advocated. Prontosil (solu has also been prescribed intramuscularly and by mouth. Fouad given by the intramuscular route has been used abroad. Prot shock therapy with T.A.B. vaccine, given intravenously, given good results. Success has also followed serum and vacc treatment. Yeast, in 2 dram doses, twice a day, and marm in 1 dram doses, twice daily, help to increase the white blo cells and reduce the tendency to neuritis.

Prophylaxis

Prophylaxis is as for typhoid, special attention being paid urine disinfection. Carriers should be isolated if found. T boiling of goat's and other milk, and strict personal cleanlin are essential. Butter and cheese should be used with care a avoided if made locally.

A SHIFT SYSTEM FOR A 48-HOUR WEEK

By GETHYN WORMALD, S.R.N.,
Diploma in Nursing, London University,
Sister Tutor, Papworth Village Settlement

A RECENT leading article in the Nursing Times raises the question of the distribution of working hours under conditions of a forty-eight-hour week or a ninety-six-hour fortnight. It suggests that consideration be given to schemes for the working of eight-hour shifts. As the Horder Report on Nursing Reconstruction also contains a recommendation that shift systems should be investigated with a view to their wider adoption, I feel that the following scheme might be of interest. It has been tried out with considerable success in at least one hospital in this country, where, after initial difficulties had been overcome, sisters found they appeared to have more nurses, and nurses appeared to have less work.

Nursing staff is divided into units, one unit to one or more wards, according to the staff required. A unit of less than seven is not practical. There are four shifts, as follows :—Morning—7.30 a.m. to 3.30 p.m. Day—11.30 a.m. to 7.30 p.m. Afternoon—3.30 p.m. to 11.30 p.m. Night—11.30 p.m. to 8.30 a.m.

Off-Duty Times Known

Nurses change shifts regularly and automatically according to a rota, each nurse having her day off in turn. The cycle will depend on the number of nurses in a unit: a unit of seven gives a day off a week; if the number exceeds seven an additional day off is given at appropriate intervals (this also makes up for the extra hour worked in the night shift).

The working of the system can be explained more easily by means of an example. In a unit of nine a nurse first works three days on afternoon shifts, going to bed as soon as she finishes duty at 11.30 p.m., having late breakfast on the following morning and resuming work at 3.30 p.m. She then works one day, on the day shift, (this is to prevent the nurse finishing at 11.30 p.m. and starting again at 7.30 a.m. next day). This is followed by three days of morning shift, when the nurse finishes at 3.30 p.m. and is free for most of the afternoon and all the evening, and able to go to bed early if she wishes to do so. When she finishes these three days it will be her turn to do night duty, starting at 11.30 p.m. the following day, after she has had twenty hours off duty. That is to say, if she finishes at 3.30 p.m. on Friday, she will be free until 11.30 p.m. on Saturday. Her night duty will finish at 8.30 a.m. on Sunday and she has all this day off, following which she begins the cycle again, starting work at 3.30 p.m. the following day, Monday, after another free period of 31 hours (24 hours off duty and seven hours sleeping time to be taken at her discretion). As this works out at a 51½-hour week she must have an extra day every second cycle; this is given consecutively with her rota day off, so that she has two and a half days in which to go away if she wishes.

The Senior Staff

Ward sisters and staff nurses are not included in the rota, but, in a unit with three staff nurses, they may work morning, afternoon, and night shifts, or where one staff nurse between two wards is sufficient at night, five staff nurses may serve the two. This may appear to necessitate an increase in trained staff, but such an increase is envisaged in any case as part of the re-organization of the training of student nurses. The sister's duty will cover absence of staff nurses for days off.

Two weeks' holiday is taken automatically every six months, the returning nurse replacing the one next due for a holiday.

The Rota

In this way the rota is made completely automatic, and although it may seem complicated at first, when once it is established no thought need be given to the arranging of off-duty times. Each nurse is given a number and the rota put up in the following form :—

Date May		SHIFTS Afternoon			Day	Morning			Night	Day off
1	...	(1)	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
2	...	(9)	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
3	...	(8)	9	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
4	...	(7)	8	9	1	2	3	4	5	6
5	...	(6)	7	8	9	1	2	3	4	5
6	...	(5)	6	7	8	9	1	2	3	4
7	...	(4)	5	6	7	8	9	1	2	3
8	...	(3)	4	5	6	7	8	9	1	2
9	...	(2)	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	1

Brackets indicate extra days off.

The number of nurses on duty at any time is as follows :—

From	To	Nurses
7.30 a.m.	8.30 a.m.	4
8.30 a.m.	11.30 a.m.	3
11.30 a.m.	7.30 p.m.	4
7.30 p.m.	11.30 p.m.	3
11.30 p.m.	7.30 a.m.	1

Adequate Relief Needed

Apart from slight alteration of nursing routine in order to give more even distribution of work, usually completed early in the morning, the main disadvantage of this scheme is the necessity for maintaining the staff at full strength. An adequate number of relief nurses is, therefore, required for sickness and other unavoidable absence; these can also be used for special work.

Fitting in Lectures

Lecture times may prove a difficulty unless the block system of training is in use. This may be overcome by arranging for lectures at change-over times—that is, 11.30 a.m to 12.30 p.m., or 3.30 to 4.30 p.m. This necessitates duplication of lectures. Alternatively, where the number of nurses is the same in each unit throughout the hospital, all nurses of the same unit number will be off duty together and lectures can be arranged to fit their duties.

It is to be noted that this is an exact eight-hour shift, which includes a meal, but only one meal is included in each shift. If there are facilities for feeding the nurses from the ward, they may be on call during meal times. Otherwise they must take their meals in turn at the convenience of the ward. They always have two main meals off duty, without any hurrying to get back afterwards, and no duplicate meals are needed in the nurses' home apart from the provision of a late breakfast. If it is thought preferable to allow a nurse off-duty time for the meal during her shift, the length of the shift can be extended, or the shortened hours of work can be balanced by giving lectures off duty. The principle may, in fact, be adapted to individual requirements in any type of hospital.

Some Advantages

The system has the following advantages :—

1. It does not require more nurses than the usual system of a long daily span with three or four hours off duty, as the overlapping of the shifts allows extra staff at the busy times of the day.
2. Night-duty shifts are no longer than those for day duty. Nurses are not on duty for long enough at a time to feel the ill effects of night work, and all nurses going on night duty know their patients and the details of their day-time treatment.
3. The more frequent change of shifts does not require as much readjustment of personal life as does a weekly change-over.
4. All nurses know exactly when they will be off duty at any time during the weeks or months in which they are attached to a particular ward.
5. Nurses have greater opportunities for relaxation, recreation and making social contacts. Non-residence becomes practicable.
6. This type of regular work with long periods of leisure and recreation is of obvious value to the nurse's health.
7. The number of nurses on a ward staff is constant and this makes for easier running of the ward.

HAPPY NURSE, HEALTHY BABY

The nurse who is not overtired brings zest and freshness to her work

Emphasis on the Patient

The instigation of such a scheme will inevitably necessitate minor alterations in daily routine. These may appear revolutionary at first, but is it not time that the daily routine was rearranged with more emphasis on consideration for the patients and nurses? Patients like the changed routine, and benefit by the continuity of nursing care which they receive. Nurses bring a freshness and zest to their work which is lacking when they are overtired and mentally stale.

SPIT AND POLISH : under battlefield conditions Q.A.'s in the Anzio beachhead still keep their uniform "spick and span"

IN STEP WITH THE Q.A.'S

I.—An officer writes to his wife from the Anzio Beachhead

'I shall not attempt to tell you of my adventures; it would be like offering you unleavened bread to put them on paper, but you should know about some devoted women I had the honour to work with at the Anzio beachhead.

Battlefield

'You have been bombed and torpedoed, and, therefore, will understand. Those experiences were intermittent. Think how you would have felt had you been under shells, bombs and machine-gun fire for 24 hours a day, seven days a week. You will hardly grasp what they stood : I am fairly hard-bitten and am still wondering how they stood it.

'Imagine a ten-acre field surrounded by pine woods and scrub oak and packed with the tents of a casualty clearing station, where the wounded were being brought in night and day in an endless bloody procession—men shattered in nerve and mutilated in body—but not out of the battle (one was never out of the battle in the beachhead).

'The whistle of a shell, the pit of the machine-gun bullet, and the horrid scream of the dive-bomber is a super-hell to a helpless man on a stretcher.

Enter the Q.A.'s

'But what is this ! These funny figures in battle dress cannot be Royal Army Medical Corps orderlies (a woman in battle dress can look funny) ! God bless 'em, the Q.A.'s are here ! Our own women are with us.

'Up go the drooping tails ! they must not see how near we were to the dread edge of panic ! They're taking it, too. And calmly they took it, proudly they hid their fear, a shaking hand was held, a joke cracked. The raid is passed—until the next—a gruesome moment is over and, in blood and mud, their work goes on.

'The sickly smell of blood, the bravely stifled groans, the dim lights—only a Hogarth could paint it, a Rupert Brooke sing it the magnificent epic of these women's defiance.

'What a tribute to the discipline of a hospital training !

'Now, this does not one whit detract from our men of the Royal Army Medical Corps. I have been deeply moved at the tenderness of a man to a man, but the Q.A.'s bring more than tenderness. No more strategically intelligent order was ever given than to send the Q.A.'s to the beachhead. The morale of a desperate venture was injected with a new vitality.

The Most Satisfying Thing

'They were of all our races and had their national characteristics: English more reserved, Scots more rugged, Welsh fatalistic, Irish demonstrative, even one was of German ancestry—but they all gave of their finest, stirred to their maternal depths by the pathetic sight of helpless men.

'Around them fluttered a little bantam of a head sister, all 'guts' and good cheer, while the colonel-in-command, an old college chum of mine, who looked just like a proud Cochin-China cock, with his trousers tucked into his grey army socks, clucked and encouraged his brown hens. A grand soldier, doing a grand job in the grand manner.

'I know you are wondering how I came to be there—that must wait—and what I was doing meanwhile—a gruesome tale. It was relieved by the job the colonel gave me : I dug them in. The motto was 'dig or die,' and the formula was two shovel-lengths long, one broad and one deep, making a grave-like cavity where you slept and dived for protection when off duty. We all became expert divers. Before I left everyone and everything had been dug in—personnel, operating tents, ward tents, and even ambulances, safe from all except a direct hit—but, alas ! we had some direct hits !

'However, to work for those lassies in the dirt was the most satisfying thing I ever did in my life.'

OBITUARIES

IT is with deep regret that we record the death of Sylvia Caldwell Boyd-Roberts, S.R.N., Q.A.I.M.N.S.R., sister, who died on June 1, 1944, after a short illness in India. Miss Boyd-Roberts trained at the Royal Surrey County Hospital from January, 1940, to February, 1943, and was engaged in private nursing for a few months. She was appointed as sister, Q.A.I.M.N.S. Reserve, October 15, 1943, and shortly afterwards embarked for India. Miss Boyd-Robert's parents live in London.

It is with regret that we record the death of Elizabeth Hay Watson, S.R.N., S.C.M., Q.A.I.M.N.S.R., sister, who died in Italy on May 25, 1944, after a short illness. Miss Watson, whose mother lives in Surrey, received her general training at King's College Hospital from 1925 to 1928. She held the post of staff nurse and later sister at the British Hospital for Mothers and Babies, Woolwich, from 1929 to 1934. She was maternity sister at the Osmania Hospital, Hyderabad, Deccan, S. India, from 1934 to 1939, and sister at the Kimberley Hospital, Kimberley, until she joined for duty in Q.A.I.M.N.S., where she served for a short time at home before embarking for North Africa.

It is with deep regret that we record the death of Minnie Thompson McCay, S.R.N., S.R.F.N., Q.A.I.M.N.S.R., sister, who died on May 29, 1944, in North Africa, as a result of an accident. Miss McCay, whose father lives in Glasgow, took her general training at the Western Infirmary, Glasgow, from 1936 to 1939, and her fever training at Ruchill Fever Hospital, Glasgow, from 1933 to 1936. She was appointed to Q.A.I.M.N.S. Reserve as a sister in November, 1940, and served at home for a short period before proceeding to Egypt.

It is with regret that we record the death of Miss Helenor Frances Morrison Horne, S.R.N., sister, T.A.N.S., at Oxford, on June 19, 1944. Miss Horne, whose home is in Shetland, trained at the Fife County Council Hospital from 1936 to 1938, and later was engaged in private nursing in Aberdeen. She enrolled for service in the T.A.N.S. in April, 1938, and was called up for duty in November, 1939, serving at home and with the M.E.F.

It is with regret that we record the death of Miss Mary Morgan, S.R.N., sister, Q.A.I.M.N.S. Reserve, in India, on June 13, 1944. Miss Morgan, whose father resides in Bridgend, Glamorganshire, trained at the Central London Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital, affiliated with the Royal Free Hospital from 1932 to 1937. She was engaged in private nursing in Cardiff, Oxford and North London for 4½ years before joining the Q.A.I.M.N.S. Reserve in December, 1942. She served in a military hospital at home before being drafted out for service in India.

MORE NURSING RECONSTRUCTION ESSAYS

From the 'Nursing Times' Competition

By MARY A. McALISTER

SPACE is rationed, so I will refer the reader to the Editor's statement of January 1, and respectfully remind her that an axiom cannot be disproved. Now, for the skeleton of a scheme the foundations of which could, I think, be laid immediately :—

1. Abolish supplementary registers, including the Mental Register. Only two viewpoints are possible here: the basic training in special hospitals is inferior to that of general hospitals, and consequently the patient gets a raw deal, or it is not inferior and, therefore, the nurse is scandalously exploited. I incline, in the main, to the latter view.

2. Stop calling domestic work 'nursing work'—a pathetic expedient that never deceived the dullest 'professional.'

3. Staff all hospitals, including maternity hospitals, with trained personnel. Make use of assistant nurses, in strict ratio to the trained staff, if practicable, but end all dependence on the work of students.

4. Make the minimum qualification for entrance to training, the school-leaving certificate or a pass in the first part of the State examination.

5. Give a three years' training in one hospital, with a subsequent year divided between mental, sick children's and fever hospitals—without which period the student cannot be registered as a general nurse.

6. Reduce by half the period at present required for admission of fully-trained people to the Midwives' Roll.

7. Tell the potential student in straightforward language what are the prospects for nurses. Tell her that, should she not be attracted by any of the fields outside of hospital, she may get work in her most obvious sphere of labour, where, even as an ordinary member of the staff, she will be able to live her own life, and have a post at least equal to, and quite as secure as that of a teacher or a civil servant.

8. Finally, I just cannot see 'John Brown, company director,' or 'John Smith, M.D.,' making any bones about paying fees for their daughters, if it can be shown that nursing is equal to other professions. Nor do I see 'John Jones, respectable tradesman,' grudging to make sacrifices to pay for his. He is already doing it for medical and teaching students. Anyway, all should be willing to support a reasoned plea for bursaries to enable students to become nurses. The foolscap is 'developing signs of congestion,' but a last word. The Royal College of Nursing could, in a short space of time, give the country an efficient nursing service without disturbing the traditions of any good hospital in this land!

By Miss MARY YOUNG, S.R.N.

GIRLS who are training to be nurses should be students in the accepted sense of the word: there would be no lack of keen, intelligent candidates if they were. The problem of eliminating their employment largely as cheap labour, as under the present system, seems to depend to a great extent on the question, 'Who pays?" It is a problem to be met by (a) the hospitals, and (b) the would-be student.

(a) The Contribution of the Hospitals

If our voluntary hospitals are no longer to be staffed this way the increase in cost will be great. Inevitably they, like the public and private schools, will need to be State-aided in the future.

A great deal of the work now done by nurses in training should be taken over by domestic help and assistant nurses. The latter should have a separate register, after approved training and an examination conducted by the General Nursing Council. They should have a fixed scale of salaries. Students, however, should not receive any remuneration until they are State-registered.

The number of combined preliminary training schools for smaller hospitals, such as the two recently opened in London, might be increased, and, if possible, extended to include a centralized 'block system' for their respective hospitals.

(b) The Contribution of the Student Nurse

As Lord Horder and others have pointed out, the nurse, as a student, should expect to pay for her training. To help those unable to afford it a wide increase in the number of scholarships and bursaries is needed. They should be based on competitive examinations for school pre-nursing courses, and also for external candidates to take their general training. They might be offered by hospital training schools, the Royal College of Nursing and the Government. More post-graduate scholarships would also be appreciated.

More could surely be done, especially in schools, by way of talks and posters, to interest girls in nursing and its many branches as a most attractive and useful career; it is largely the present conditions of training that are deterrent.

FINAL EXAMINATION FOR MENTAL NURSES

QUESTION 2.—How many morbid fears (phobias) arise; of what mental disorders may they be symptoms; what can a nurse do to help a patient suffering from such a condition?

Morbid fears may have their origin in some deep-seated emotional disturbance, probably the result of faulty education and unfavourable environment. In childhood wrong impressions may be received from unintentionally bad suggestions. In later life, under stress, these impressions may recur as morbid fears. This is particularly liable to occur in those constitutionally weak, especially where anxiety is present.

Much instinctive behaviour is directed towards the avoidance of unpleasant circumstances of life. If this behaviour gets out of control morbid fears may arise. Many people are victims of specific phobias, which are closely allied to superstitions—for example, fear of open or closed spaces, dirt, etcetera. The principal mental disorders in which morbid fears may be symptoms are anxiety states, anxiety hysteria, neurasthenia, compulsive obsessions and agitated melancholia.

Morbid fears have a particularly ill effect upon the physical condition, giving rise to gastro-intestinal disturbances, poor appetite, loss of weight, sleeplessness, headaches and inability to concentrate.

For the first few weeks the patient should be nursed in bed in the open air during the day time, weather permitting. Frequent meals of high nutritious value and vitamin content; attention to mouth, regulation of bowels, daily baths, including a warm, prolonged bath each evening, suitable bed-clothing, good ventilation, and quiet surroundings will do much to promote the rest and sleep so essential.

During this period the nurse must do her utmost, in a calm, unhurried manner, to gain the patient's confidence and co-operation. The patient should be encouraged to talk of his worries; it will help to a greater understanding if the nurse is a good listener.

As the physical condition improves the patient will be allowed up each day spending as much time as possible in the open air. Creative interest must be fostered and social contacts made by diversional games, exercises, folk-dancing and other forms of entertainment. Useful constructive occupation should be followed at the earliest possible moment and intervals of rest arranged according to the physical state.

Once the patient can see the futility of the fears and is able to laugh at them they can be mastered, and finally all reference to them should cease. Before discharge advice will be given to prevent recurrence.

THE GENERAL NURSING COUNCIL FOR ENGLAND AND WALES

TAKING the chair at the meeting of the General Nursing Council for England and Wales on July 28, Miss D. M. Smith, O.B.E., chairman, announced the death on July 23 of Dame Alicia Lloyd Still, D.B.E., R.R.C. Nominated by the Ministry of Health to the first General Nursing Council for England and Wales in 1920, she had been elected by the nurses at each successive Council until 1937, when she refused nomination for re-election. During all her years of service on the Council she had been chairman of the Education and Examination Committee, and done much to establish the nurses' training and inaugurate the State examination. Miss Smith read a letter from Dame Ellen Musson, D.B.E., R.R.C., expressing her deep regret at the death of one who had worked so very hard to raise the standard of education in the training schools of this country. Miss Smith felt sure members of Council would like to place on record their appreciation of the great service Dame Alicia had given to the Council and to the nursing profession as a whole and also to send a message of sympathy to her family.

Miss Helen Dey, O.B.E., R.R.C., in adding a word of appreciation of Dame Alicia's work not only on the Council but for all nurses and nursing in this country, said that what so many specially appreciated was her vision—an outstanding feature of her life—which had enabled her to raise the level not only of nursing but of nurses. Miss R. A. Cox-Davies, C.B.E., R.R.C., Miss Dey added, had expressed her sorrow at not being able to be present to add her appreciation.

Congratulation

Members of Council, Miss Smith felt, would wish to extend congratulations to Dr. H. M. C. Macaulay and Dr. W. Rees Thomas on their appointments as honorary physicians to H.M. the King. There was applause from members, and the two doctors signified their acknowledgment.

Arising from the minutes, the Minister of Health had written approving, in the circumstances, Council's proposal of superannuation for Miss E. F. Knox, Assistant Registrar of the General Nursing Council, at £285 17s. 3d. a year. Mr. H. M. Walton said that this was extremely satisfactory for it formed a valuable precedent.

The Assistant Nurses Syllabus

A further letter from the Ministry of Health stated that the Minister had looked at the proposed syllabus for assistant nurses with interest, but that he felt he must defer his approval until Council submitted the rules relating to the examination for admission to the roll of assistant nurses. Council was no doubt considering this as a matter of urgency. There was also a confidential letter from the Ministry of Health which Council considered in camera.

Scottish Rules

Among correspondence, Council had received the General Nursing Council for Scotland's rules for existing and intermediate assistant nurses. Miss Smith also read a personal letter, which she thought might interest members of Council, from the Registrar of the Division of Nursing of the Department of Health in New Zealand, congratulating her on her appointment as chairman of the General Nursing Council and speaking of the kindness she had always had from the Council, and of her admiration of the work the Council and British nurses were doing in extremely difficult conditions.

Recommendations of the Registration Committee, which Council approved, included the inclusion of 129 nurses—14 by reciprocity and 115 by examination in the registers, the re-inclusion of 92 nurses on the register who had hitherto failed to pay retention fees, the issue of four duplicate certificates and 13 duplicate badges and the admission to the List of 76 nurses—60 general nurses, one male nurse, three nurses for mental diseases, one sick children's nurse and eleven fever nurses. Council also agreed to the scheme of election with revised dates, that the notices of election be published in the same nursing and daily papers as on the occasion of the 1937 election, and that the addresses of nurses in the books of the Council on July 31, 1944, be used for the election and that 'the Registration Committee be empowered to deal with all matters concerning the election of Council.'

The Education and Examination Committee recommended and Council approved the extension for 2 years of the following:—

(i) Wembley Hospital and the Isolation Hospital, Dartford, as complete training schools for general nurses and fever nurses, respectively; (ii) Birmingham Women's Hospital, the Royal Cripples' Hospital, Birmingham, and St. Michael's Hospital, Hayle, Cornwall, as affiliated training schools for general nurses. Council agreed to terminate the scheme of affiliation between Liverpool Open-Air Hospital, Wirral, and Guy's Hospital, S.E., without prejudice to nurses already admitted for training. Council approve two years' provisional affiliation between Princess Elizabeth Orthopaedic Hospital, Exeter, and Bristol Royal Hospital.

Council approved, for the purposes of Part I of the Preliminary Examination, a one-year whole-time course at Howell's School, Denbigh, and a two-year part-time course at Bradford Technical College, Bradford, and provisionally approved a one-year whole-time course at Preston Park School for Girls, Preston.

Addition to the Roll

The Assistant Nurses' Committee reported that Dr. Macauley had been re-elected chairman and Council approved the recommendations that the names of 211 applicants be added to the Roll of Assistant Nurses.

A special meeting of Council will take place on September 13; in view of a certain amount of work with regard to the assistant nurse, Council decided to postpone the monthly meeting from the usual date of September 22 to September 29.

Next meeting: Friday, September 29.

Agents Affecting the Respiratory Tract

The following table shows the major aetiological agents which are liable in industry to affect the respiratory tract:—

Nature of Substance	Industry
Liquids	Accidental aspiration Laboratory workers
Sprays Atomized liquids	Plating industry Painting
*Gases, vapours, smokes and fumes	Chemical dye and metal industries
Radio-active emanations	Mining, X-Ray and radium workers Instrument dial painters
Dusts.—(a) Organic	Allergic conditions due to inhalation of cotton and other dusts
(b) Inorganic Silica Asbestos	Silica in mining, quarrying and pottery industry Asbestos industry
Bacteria: Anthrax bacillus Pneumococcus Tubercle bacillus Fungi	 Wool and hide industry Slag and manganese industry Secondary infection in silicosis and asbestosis Farmers, millers, transport workers

(From 'Chest Diseases in Industry,' by A. J. Amor, M.D.—The Practitioner. By this author the following gases, in various concentrations and for varying times of exposure, are listed as toxic and irritating: chlorine, bromine, hydrogen chloride, hydrogen flucride, sulphur dioxide, nitrous fumes, ammonia, hydrogen sulphide, phosphorus, trichloride phosphorus pentachloride, arsenious chloride, formaldehyde, phosgene, nickel carbonyl.

INDUSTRIAL NURSING

Abstract of a lecture given to the Mansfield Branch of the Royal College of Nursing

By DORIS V. DOUGLAS-NORMAN, M.R.C.S., D.P.H.

The industrial nurse must make contact with the local health services. Here she is with the worker in the out-patient clinic

INDUSTRIAL nursing is a comparatively new sphere of nursing, and it should be considered a branch of public health nursing, for which special training is necessary, including the taking of the Industrial Nursing Certificate issued by the Royal College of Nursing or a university, such as Birmingham. Though there were some nurses working in industry before the war, it is only in the last four years that so many more recruits have been called for. I think it can still be looked upon as pioneer work, which, if developed on the right lines, can play a big part in helping to create and maintain an A1 nation.

It is important in developing this branch of nursing that the ethics of the nursing profession should be observed, bearing in mind that a factory environment is very different to that met with in other branches of nursing. The nurse is not dealing with a sick person in bed, but with a healthy individual. 'Working capacity' is his foremost consideration, all the treatment he requires bears relation in his mind to this, and it may be difficult at times for the nurse to hold steadfastly to her professional rules. The Royal College of Nursing has rules for the guidance of the nurse. No doubt most of you know of them. I have added to them a little, and would call your attention to Rule 6.

'The medical records of the employees maintained by the industrial medical officer are confidential documents. As they may be kept in the custody of the nurse during the doctor's absence she must not allow any other person to have access to them, except with the approval of the works' medical officer and consent of the employee.' This rule is not observed strictly enough; the records must, literally, be kept under lock and key and nobody must have access to them without the consent of the works' medical officer.

Conditions of Employment

A nurse, on seeking an industrial appointment, should, from the first, get definite rules as to (a) her status; (b) her responsibilities; (c) to whom she is responsible. So much trouble has been caused, and still may be caused, by a nurse not doing this. I should welcome legislation, which would prevent a young, inexperienced nurse, just qualified, taking up an industrial appointment where there may not even be a part-time medical officer, and where she may be working under lay and not professional personnel. Since February of this year the Ministry of Labour will not direct a nurse to an industrial appointment if she is under 27 years of age, so the Royal College of Nursing will not take nurses for industrial training under this age.

Of course, if a doctor is employed whole time at the factory the nurse should be appointed by him and be responsible to him. In the factory, where the part-time medical officer is appointed, the question arises who should appoint the nurse? Mrs. Perry, of the Royal College, speaking in an address to the members of the Association of Industrial Medical Officers in London last November, stated that the general manager should appoint the nurse and the nurse should be responsible to the doctor. But I do not think many general managers know much about the training of nurses, or would be good judges of their experience or personality. Personally, I think it would be much better if the general manager, in conjunction with the doctor, appointed the nurse.

Then the question arises as to who should appoint the nurse if no medical officer is attached to the factory. At the moment the general manager would do so, but in the comprehensive medical service promised after the war I hope this will not happen. I should like a board or authority appointed whose consent would have to be obtained before the appointment was confirmed. This is what the Association of Industrial Medical Officers are asking for. In a memorandum submitted by the Association of Industrial Medical Officers to the Industrial Medical Service Sub-Committee of the British Medical Association, in July, 1943, it was stated: 'The establishment of an industrial medical service could be brought about in a variety of ways. Examination of these has, however, led the Association of Industrial Medical Officers to the conclusion that the most desirable and practicable scheme would be one having the following characters: It should have responsibility, both to industry and to the authority administering the comprehensive national health service. This would imply that the individual industrial medical officer, whilst responsible to the management of the concerns in which he works, would also have definitely prescribed responsibilities to the said authority.'

For the Small Factory

Before the war 97 per cent. of factories employed fewer than 250 workers; 52 per cent. of all workers were employed by small firms with this number or less; 77 per cent. employed only 25 or fewer workers. So it would be impossible for all firms to afford the services of a State-registered nurse, and the nurse might have to be appointed for a group of factories with assistant nurses working under her.

The scope of the work is enormous and calls for the very best type of nurse—one possessing wide surgical experience, infinite tact, the patience of Job, the ability to hold her own and to tackle any situation that arises, from a complicated point of factory medical law to a bad major accident, such as 'scalping.'

The Nurse's Duties

Surely no one now holds the view that a nurse sits in the works' ambulance room waiting for casualties to arise. I have had fierce arguments with factory managements over this. The nurse's duties should include:—

(1) Assisting the medical officer in the pre-employment examination of new employees. The nurse obtaining (a) the name, address and age; (b) height and weight of the employee; (c) testing the eyes by Shellen's test types; (d) testing the urine; (e) obtaining the menstrual history in cases of female labour.

(2) The keeping of medical statistics. These, if properly done, take up a good deal of time. They include:—(a) the daily summary sheet; (b) the weekly summary sheet—Analysis of illness and accidents in the various departments to ascertain at once any hazard occurring; (c) the history sheet of each employee; (d) the medical records; (e) special treatment cards—for example, actino therapy; (f) statistics to ascertain the average number of days lost per person for sickness and accident, worked out over definite periods; male and female labour should be calculated separately and part-time workers differentiated from full-time workers; (g) the annual report.

(3) The actual work in the ambulance room, which includes: (a) supervision of the cleaners; checking up equipment and stock and preparation of the drug orders; (b) the organization of the work—there should be no waiting queues; (c) the nurse should be fully conversant with the particular hazards of the factory—for example, trichlorethylene is widely used as a degresser; the nurse should know that if the plant breaks down fumes are given off, which act as a narcotic poison, and first-aid treatment for this is required for any casualties working at the plant; (d) nurses are expected to do minor suturing, and very good they are at it—most wounds seem to heal by first intention; (e) nurses under the direction of the medical officer should be responsible for the first-aid workers' training (there is generally a first-aid officer who does the practical training under the medical officer's direction; there has been friction in some factories in the past between the nurse and the first-aid officer); (f) the nurse should play a leading part in the preventive aspect of the employee's health, encouraging this by health talks, pamphlets and posters; (g) to assist in the dental, optical, chiropody and ray treatment in the factory; (h) to assist in the rehabilitation of injured workmen; (i) to co-operate with the ordinary health services; (j) sick visiting and convalescent care; in some factories there may be practically no liaison between the factory's medical services and the outside health authorities.

The Salary of the Industrial Nurse

No one is more keen than myself for the nurse to be paid the salary laid down by the Royal College of Nursing and Ministry of Labour, and it is most distressing to see how badly paid some industrial nurses are. I do not blame nurses who accept industrial nursing appointments at low salaries: but it makes it so much harder to get things right. It must be fully understood that in industry status is according to the pay packet, and if a nurse accepts an inadequate salary she definitely puts herself on a low grade with regard to capability.

At the same time the nurse must prove her worth. Most managements may not be idealists. It is useless for the nurse to quote Florence Nightingale and lay stress on the 'ministering angel' attitude. She must prove her worth by hard facts and figures written down in black and white. For example, in one factory the sepsis rate was 5 per cent. A medical and nursing review was inaugurated, and over the next year the rate was reduced to 0.05 per cent. Any management could but say, at such a result, 'There must be something in these women, after all.' If there is quick attention in the ambulance room for the care of minor injuries, and the employee gets back to the machine with the minimum waste of time, the foreman is pleased: he knows his day's results are going to be up to the mark! Managements have got to keep up production; this was vital in 1940, and the medical department must appreciate these facts and understand what a harassing time managements have if orders are not out in time.

On the employee's side nurses will soon be appreciated and get asked advice on all and sundry matters, and will sometimes be expected to be a complete encyclopaedia.

The Royal College of Nursing's scale for a State-registered nurse is a commencing salary of £260 per annum, rising by £15 per year to £350, plus an extra £25 per annum for the holding of the Industrial Nurse's Certificate, plus an arrangement for the nurse to continue her pension scheme. I should like to add also an allowance for uniform and the washing of it. This is the minimum to be aimed at, not the maximum.

Some of you may have seen Dr. Donald Stewart's scale. He gave a very good classification of the grading of industrial nurses in a factory or group of factories, the maximum salary being £450 to £500 for a senior post, held by a nurse of wide industrial nursing experience; and, of course, this would be a post of great responsibility.

The Work of the Assistant Nurse

There is great scope in the factory for the assistant nurse, providing she works under a State-registered nurse. I use the term assistant nurse in its proper sense. In some factories the State-registered nurse, the State-registered nurse on the Supplementary part of the Register, the assistant nurse, and the partially-trained woman (sometimes very partially trained)—all have the same responsibilities and are co-equal in status and working hours, though their salaries may vary. This is, in my opinion, altogether wrong. The State-registered nurse should be the senior nurse, and the State-registered nurse on the Supplementary Register next, then the assistant nurse, and then, a long way after, the partially trained woman.

The nurse should not be paid overtime. The Ministry of Supply used to pay £160 per annum, plus £5 bonus. Now things are better. The British Medical Association's scale of some two years ago was most disappointing. I think it was £250 to £260 for an experienced State-registered nurse and £200 per annum for a State-registered nurse starting in industry.

The relations of the nurse with the welfare superintendent are a thorny subject, and it is well to admit that internecine strife occurs all over the country between factory medical and welfare departments. There are two sides to every question, and we must be fair. We naturally look at things from the medical point of view, but we must try to see the other point of view. Owing to the Factories (Medical and Welfare Services) Order, 1940, there has been an enormous increase in welfare work in the factory. The Government welfare course of three months has attracted various kinds of people from university graduates to forewomen; also people holding the certificates of the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John of Jerusalem. I do not believe you can learn welfare work in three months, if not supported by a nurse's training. There is also a welfare course extending over two years; I think it is to be extended to three years. People taking this are really trained welfare workers, and, I should imagine, much easier to work with than the 'three months trainees.'

The Institute of Labour Management and the Industrial Welfare Society are the two societies interested in welfare work.

The relations of the State-registered industrial nurse and the welfare supervisor may, in many factories, still be very difficult. The fact emerges of which I am absolutely certain: the medical people must never come under the welfare department: the two departments must be independent of each other, each responsible directly to the managing director; and yet, if any decent work is to be achieved, the two departments must work side by side.

Combined Posts?

The Royal College of Nursing suggests that in any factory employing over 150 workers, a State-registered nurse should be appointed, and that the post of industrial nurse and welfare worker should be combined—the nurse, of course, first taking the appropriate welfare training. The Royal College of Nursing considers that the posts can be combined for up to 1,000 employees in light industries and 500 in heavy ones. I think these figures rather high, in view of the new methods coming into force for the training of employees: special training of foremen, more attention paid to the psychology of the workman, monotony tests, accident proneness tests, and so on.

In the factories where the two posts cannot be combined, it is here that the trouble starts. It seems to me that the term 'welfare supervisor' should be confined to the senior nurse or sister-in-charge, and the term 'labour officer' should be confined to the person appointing, allocating and discharging labour, and who keeps the non-medical statistics, such as time sheets. Apparently it is too late to mend matters: the labour officer is often called the 'welfare officer,' and this tends to make people think that the medical department is part of the welfare department, which, of course, it is not. I foresee more difficulties ahead arising out of the new terms 'personnel officer,' 'hygiene and ventilation officer,' and 'dietetic adviser.' When the two posts cannot be combined the nurse must have equal status with the labour officer and be paid a comparable salary. This is vital.

I have already outlined the nurse's work. She has plenty of scope with her own work, and has to exercise tact in dealing with both the medical officer inside the factory and the general practitioner outside. She must extend this tact in dealing with the welfare supervisor, always bearing in mind that she, the nurse, represents a most honoured profession, with high professional standards if she is weak and lets those standards go she is letting down her whole profession.

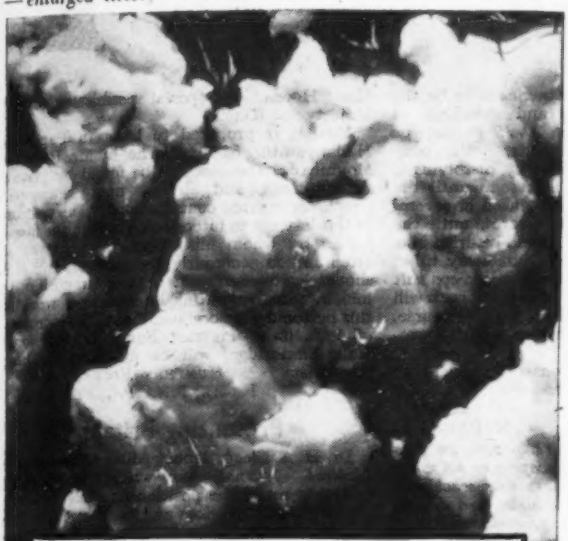
SCIENCE AND BUREAUCRACY

Experience of all Government services has taught all those who were hitherto ignorant of the fact that the routine, the form filling, and the precedent-worshipping proclivities of bureaucracy are diametrically opposed to these qualities which vivify science.

It would thus seem clear that any State medical service, particularly if it is likely to become complete and comprehensive, must be planned slowly, almost diffidently, and with the utmost care, in order that the best features of British medicine may survive.—A letter in St. Bartholomew's Hospital Journal, June, 1944, page 90.

In the presence of the gastric juice in the stomach, milk clots and separates into curds. This is what it looks like —enlarged twice.



The

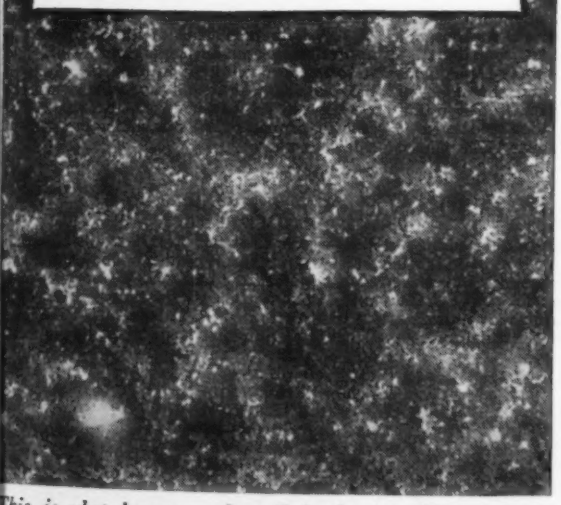
BENGER'S FOOD

As a result of self-digestive action by natural pancreatic enzymes, the milk proteins are so modified that when prepared Benger's Food comes into contact with the gastric juices, it separates into fine flocculi, presenting a very large surface area to the gastric juice. This is in marked contrast to the characteristic curd of unmodified milk. By the time Benger's Food is sufficiently cool to drink, the self-digestion is carried as far as it need be for all cases where digestion is partially impaired.

BENGER'S LTD HOLMES CHAPEL CHESHIRE



This is what happens when Benger's is added and the mixture is allowed to digest for fifteen minutes. The formation of heavy curds is prevented.

Sleep*, too, is rationed..

There is often a shortage of sleep-hours for those working under the stress of war conditions . . . Up at all hours . . . Extra late shifts . . . Here is a way to make the limited sleep ration go further. Drink a cup of Bourn-vita before putting out the light. It contains malt, milk, eggs and chocolate and its Vitamin B, phosphorus and calcium are valuable for the nerves. Bourn-vita brings healthy, natural sleep. It is light and easily digestible—as good for you as it is for your convalescent patients.

No Poaching !

Miss Hayman evidently considers that the State-registered nurse is more efficient in her care of children than the nursery nurse, in spite of the fact that the former may have no knowledge of healthy children and little of sick children, while the latter has trained for exactly the type of work done in the nurseries. It seems a pity that the Minister of Health, in requiring State-registered nurses as matrons for the residential and day nurseries, has agreed to such waste of the skill and training of the hospital nurse in work for which she is seldom suited, while she is most urgently needed in her own profession.

Are we, as State-registered nurses or student nurses, being fair to the smaller number of qualified nursery nurses in the question of senior posts in nurseries? We have gone a long way to winning our own battles, but we must not now poach on other people's preserves without the proper qualifications for the work. As a college-trained nursery nurse, with experience in social work, and day nursery work, I have no doubt which training is the more adequate for the work in our nurseries.

Why not use college-trained nursery nurses, and, if suitable, those nurses with a less intensive training in the nurseries? Otherwise why increase the training to two years?

The student in the college is taught the care of the healthy child by night and by day : how to feed him suitably, clothe him satisfactorily, and to attend to all his needs. She learns nursery management, child psychology and child-training, diets and infant feeding, cooking, laundry, domestic work, needlework and hygiene, and has sufficient knowledge to judge if the child is not well and to get further advice. A little experience in social work would complete a most thorough training. Many suitable candidates would be found for the higher posts. Are these well-qualified women to work under a State-registered nurse many of whom, go to nurseries without any real knowledge of the work, and have to pick it up from the nursery nurse who works subordinate to her?

To Rinse or Not to Rinse

Looking through an article on the care of amputation stumps (see Nursing Times, June 17) I was surprised to read in the Nursing Times that soap should be left in socks after washing !

This method of washing wool is years out of date and has been proved by chemical tests and by the housewife's practical experience to be the main cause of hardening and shrinkage of woollen socks ! A woollen sock should be squeezed through warm water with soap flakes or with a lather made by dissolving a suitable quantity of good bar soap until the dirt is all loosened, and then rinsed in several changes of clear water, also warm, until the water is left clear. Then it should be dried in a warm place, shaken well and put away till it is wanted. Wool washed that way keeps soft for years. Leave the soap in and the sock will be like a board in six weeks ! And, of course, the discomfort to the wearer will be proportionate.

You said the ordinary housewife should be asked how to wash woollens—well, this is the modern way.

P. M. PAGE.

[We have made various enquiries on this vexed question of leaving the soap in or out when washing woollies, as there are two schools of thought. From the scientific angle, in a district where the water is hard, a percentage of soap should be left in as preferable to the lime scum of the water. In districts where the water is soft, the woollens should be rinsed so that they are soap free.—ED.]

Tribute to a Papworth Matron

Your readers will doubtless be familiar with the name of Miss K. L. Borne, O.B.E., of Papworth. Associated as she was with the foundation of the Papworth Village Settlement, for more than a quarter of a century she devoted all her many gifts as matron to the promotion of the interests of Papworth patients, and in particular to those of members of her own profession.

Because of ill-health she has been compelled to retire from active work ; but never will she be forgotten at Papworth, least of all by the nurses. In 1928 she was the moving spirit in the campaign which resulted in the establishment of ' Borne House ' to which nurses who had grown old in Papworth's service might retire ; and some six or seven years later she instituted a home for tuberculous nurses, where such nurses might live, after the conclusion of active hospital treatment, and resume the practice of their calling under special conditions. In this home—to which thousands of nurses all over the world contributed—provision was made for some forty tuberculous nurses to find a new home, and new hope, at Papworth. The home, in which from the first Her Majesty Queen Mary took the keenest interest, was eventually named ' The Queen Mary House ' by special permission of Her Majesty the King.

Now it is proposed to hang in Papworth Hall a painting of Miss Borne, by Mr. Roderick Moynihan. The cost will be found by private subscriptions, and already many Papworth people have made contributions. The purpose of this letter is to interest and inform the larger public by whom Miss Borne's work was so often and so generously encouraged : and if it should lead to any old or new supporters to join in commemorating Miss Borne's work in this personal yet permanent way, the secretary of the Borne Portrait Fund, of Papworth Hall, Cambridge, will be delighted to hear from them.

Presenting Britain

Dr. H. A. Clegg, deputy editor of the British Medical Journal, has written a detailed summing up of the position and development of the medical services and medical education in this country. Under the title "Medicine in Britain," this essay forms one of the British Council's shilling books (published by Longmans Green and Co., Ltd.) on our various services, arts and recreations—the British System of Government, Justice, Education, Ships and Seamen, Social Services, Literature, Agriculture and Music. The ten illustrations to "Medicine in Britain " include one of deep X-ray therapy at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, E.C.1, of Papworth, a cookery class at St. Mary Abbots Hospital Clinic, W,8 and the Army Blood Supply Depot at Bristol.

The British Theatre by W. Bridges-Adams, director of the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre, Stratford, from 1919-1934 tells a strangely similar story. The medicine man of the Middle Ages has his counterpart in the Elizabethan ' rogue and vagabond ' and the move to-day for a national medical service runs curiously parallel to the plea for a national theatre. Mr. Bridges-Adams shows that the theatre is no tawdry backwater : playwrights, players and playgoers have shown in the stunts, church plays, the joyous Elizabethan drama, the gloriously coarse Restoration comedies, the Victorian humours and even by our present century diversities, both a salutary reflection of the daily trivialities of life and a lead to appreciating and developing our robust, and to other people perhaps, fantastic ideals of life. These books are only available for export; we hope in the better days ahead we shall be able to purchase such stimulating literature in this country.

IN MEMORY OF DAME ALICIA LLOYD STILL, O.B.E., R.R.C.

ST. Margaret's Church, Westminster, was well filled on Friday, July 28, for the simple, but impressive, memorial service to Dame Alicia Lloyd Still, who died on Sunday, July 23, at Buckfastleigh, Devon. The whole of the right side of the nave was occupied by sisters and nurses from St. Thomas's Hospital, in their well-known uniform, and well-known figures from the nursing and medical world came to pay a last tribute to her work for the nursing profession. Among those present were : Miss S. V. Hillyers, O.B.E., matron, St. Thomas's Hospital; Miss D. C. Bridges, principal matron, Territorial Army Nursing Service; Miss D. M. Smith, O.B.E., matron, the Middlesex Hospital, W.1, chairman, the General Nursing Council; Miss M. E. Edwards, King Edward's Hospital Fund for London; Miss A. C. Neill, R.R.C., matron-in-chief, Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps; Mrs. Meynard Carter, Florence Nightingale International Foundation; Miss G. E. Davies, representing Dame Ellen Musson and the president of the International Council of Nurses; Miss D. S. Coode, chairman of council, Royal College of Nursing; Miss M. A. V. Soutar, principal matron, Queen Alexandra's Imperial Military Nursing Service.

Beginning with St. John's words, ' Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's House are many mansions : if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you . . .', the service, in aptly chosen words, expressed well the spirit which animated the late matron of St. Thomas's Hospital, and ended fittingly with the singing of Bunyan's inspiring hymn :

' He, who would valiant be,
'Gainst all disaster,
Let him in constancy
Follow the Master.
There's no discouragement
Shall make him once relent
His first avowed intent,
To be a pilgrim.'

As shafts of sunlight pierced the broken windows of St. Margaret's Church, and the words and music of this martial tune rose among the pillars, everyone must have felt it was the memorial note that Dame Alicia would herself have chosen.

Easing

the anxiety associated with Hæmorrhoids . . . .

A feeling of immediate ease follows the use of GERMOLOIDS and encourages the confidence in their soothing and healing properties. The insertion of these haemorrhoidal suppositories is perfectly simple. They are also readily retained, and nothing could be cleaner in use. Many nurses know, by personal experience, how quickly GERMOLOIDS will reduce congestion and distention and relieve the persistent itching which so often colours the mind of the patient with a chronic anxiety. Any member of the Nursing profession unacquainted with GERMOLOIDS is invited to send at once for a free trial sample. Supplies at all chemists 1/5 per box.

SEAT OF LEARNING

There are things a woman can learn only from a baby. They are like happy secrets inside her; such as knowing that her gentleness and selflessness are the things on which the new small life depends. But a mother's life is a busy life, and for many baby comforts she wisely turns to the old long-tried, long-trusted things like Johnson's baby powder. It's been going for over fifty years, but babies are still old-fashioned and they like it best. They simply think it feels nicer!

Mothers have other reasons too. Johnson's is the softest, true, but almost more important is the question of confidence. For so long now, Johnson and Johnson have been practised in the science of making things clean, pure, hygienic. Not only the famous baby powder, and the baby soap and the baby cream, but also many "grown up" things are made in the same spotless factories with the same tireless care. With little personal things that touch you intimately—you may grow out of being a baby, but you never grow out of Johnson & Johnson's care!

News in Brief

A Worthy Successor

OWING to pressure on his time Dr. Charles Hill has resigned the chairmanship of the Central Council for Health Education. His successor is Dr. Arthur Massey, C.B.E., medical officer of health for Coventry.

Royal Welcome Home

H.M. QUEEN Mary, accompanied by Lady Cripps, recently visited an R.A.F. Transport Command airfield in Southern England, and talked to wounded soldiers just evacuated from France by air.

Gift to Hospital

As a result of Hospital Sunday Fund collections, the General Hospital, Nottingham, has benefited to the amount of £1,967.

Recruitment for Sanatoria

BIRMINGHAM health authorities are making a special appeal to girls in the areas of Birmingham and the surrounding counties to take up sanatorium nursing as a career.

Editors in Embryo

THE Students Nurses' Association of Warwick Hospital now run their own magazine; the July issue is 12 duplicated pages of hospital wit and wisdom.

From Trinidad to Sussex

MISS I. Milne is the new matron of the Royal Sussex County Hospital, Brighton. She trained at the West London Hospital, and, prior to taking up her present post, was matron of the Colonial Hospital, Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Australian Penicillin

AUSTRALIA, in the Commonwealth's serum laboratories, is now producing all the penicillin required for the treatment of battle casualties in the South West Pacific area.

For F.A.P. Nurses

As from January 1 trained nurses in charge of first-aid posts will receive £4 a week, inclusive of allowances, instead of £3 14s. 1d.

Chocolate for the Liberated

THE Ministry of Food, without reduction of the civilian ration, is supplying vitamized chocolate to the people of Europe, just behind the fighting lines.

A Grand Tribute

NURSES of the Princess Elizabeth Orthopaedic Hospital, Exeter, raised £1,118 in a Salute the Soldier week.

For an Improved Dietary

THE kitchens of the Otley (West Riding) County Hospital are to be re-equipped at a cost of £2,641.

Patients not "Inmates"

AT a meeting of Northamptonshire Public Assistance Committee, Councillor F. F. Parsons asked that people in public assistance hospitals should be referred to at all meetings, and in all reports, as patients not inmates.

Request to Diabetics

THE Ministry of Health is asking diabetics living in safe areas to offer hospitality to children and fellow sufferers, who are evacuating from Southern England.

Goodbye Gift

ON her recent retirement, the staff of Chester Royal Infirmary presented Miss M. S. Boumphrey, sister of the children's ward for 23½ years, with a wireless set and cheque.

Ascorbic Acid for Hospitals

THE Ministry of Health requests that, as diet in general has adequate vitamin C, hospitals should reduce the administration of ascorbic acid to the minimum. The maximum of 250 grammes per 100 occupied beds per quarter is, the Ministry considers, an adequate supply.

For Hertfordshire Children

As a temporary home for young children, whose mothers are in hospital or incapacitated, Hertfordshire County Council is purchasing a house with extensive grounds at Ware. The cost is £10,000.

From Scotland

To Help the Seamen

THE staff of Peesweep Sanatorium, Paisley, has sent a further donation of £5 to provide gifts for the Merchant Navy Comforts Service.

Increase in Income

THE Scotland's Garden Scheme shows an increase in income of £2,000 on the comparative figures to mid-July of last year.

FIRST AID FOR FIREGUARDS

Under the title 'The Fireguard's Pocket Chart,' Messrs. Jordan and Sons, Ltd., have published a series of illustrated diagrams of the best way to deal with various types of incendiaries. The broadsheet also includes notes on elementary first aid, details of fire prevention equipment, and an outline of the general fireguard plan. The author is T. M. Ross.

The second (revised) edition is now obtainable from the publishers at 116, Chancery Lane, W.C.2. Price 5d. (post free); 100 copies, £1 10s. 7d.

Nightingale Service in New York

Approximately 1,200 graduate and student nurses attended the twentieth annual Nightingale service at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City.

In places of special honour were the directors of the schools of nursing in their white indoor uniforms, two small groups of nurses in the uniforms of the Spanish-American War and World War I. Other impressive groups were from the Army Nurse Corps and the Navy Nurse Corps. Graduate nurses studying at Teachers' College in cap and gown, were lead by members of the nursing faculty. One thousand student nurses, in the uniforms of the United States Cadet Nurse Corps or the uniforms of their own schools, were grouped by schools. This uniformed host filled the entire space on each side of the centre aisle of the cathedral, which measures one-tenth of a mile from the main entrance to the altar, a most impressive and inspiring sight.

£250 FOR RESEARCH

In connection with housing schemes, the Chadwick Trustees are prepared to offer an award of £250, to a man or woman qualified to undertake investigation on the reasonable maximum 'density' range (per acre) for small houses with gardens, suitable for the intermediate and outer zones of large towns. The investigation should take a comprehensive town planning arrangement into consideration.

Those wishing to be considered should apply to the Clerk to the Chadwick Trustees, 204, Abbey House, Westminster, S.W.1, giving qualifications and experience, and a short summary of the general plan of research proposed, before the end of September.

Announcement

The Public Health Section of the Royal College of Nursing is offering bursaries to assist members to take the course of parentcraft (see supplement (i) No. 651.

Public Health Section

Public Health Section within the Glasgow Branch.—The second of the post graduate lectures on midwifery will be held in the Scottish Nurses' Club, 203, Bath Street, Glasgow, on Wednesday, August 9, at 7.30 p.m. The fee will be 1s. for members and 2s. for non-members. Please bring membership cards. The first of the post graduate lectures on midwifery was held in the Scottish Nurses' Club, 203, Bath Street, Glasgow, on July 26. Dr. D. MacKay Hart gave a helpful and stimulating talk on "Shock". There was an excellent attendance.

Branch Reports

Chesterfield Branch.—Members and friends enjoyed an instructive afternoon on July 20, at Whittington Hall Institution for the Care and Protection of Mental Defectives. The medical superintendent, Dr. Furniss, who kindly invited the party, gave a talk on the work of the Institution. After a visit to the various departments, a very nice tea was provided. At a garden party held at Brambling House Hospital Annexe in June, the "Bring and Buy" stall realized £9.3.0 for the aged nurses' fund.

Glasgow Branch.—A general meeting was held at the Scottish Nurses' Club, 203, Bath Street, on Thursday, July 13, to discuss "The Place of the Nursing Profession in a National Health Service". Before the meeting, members had received a list of comparisons between the Government White Paper and the Horder Nursing Reconstruction Report, which had been drawn up by the Scottish Board, and proved of great value to members in forming their opinions and putting forward suggestions. It is hoped to have further discussion on this important subject.

King's Lynn and District Branch.—An open meeting of two sessions for trained nurses will be held at the West Norfolk and King's Lynn General Hospital, King's Lynn, on Thursday, August 10, at 2.30 p.m., by kind invitation of the matron, Miss L. E. Armstrong. The subject for discussion will be the 'Horder Report, Section 2 on Education and Training of the Nurse, and Nursing and the National Health Service.' The speakers will be Miss K. Armstrong, editor of the Nursing Times, and Miss I. Charley, chairman of the Public Health Section of the Royal College of Nursing. Trained nurses everywhere are invited to attend and contribute to the discussion.

Scunthorpe and Brigg Branch.—A business meeting was held on Saturday, July 22, at the district nurses' home. The report drawn up by the sub-committee to discuss improvements in local health services, was read and approved by members. The report on health services sent to the branch for discussion was read. It was arranged to have further meetings to consider this. Refreshments were provided.

Tunbridge Wells and District Branch.—By kind invitation of the matron, Miss Fagelman, a meeting for trained nurses will be held at the County Hospital, Pembury, on Thursday, August 24, at 6 p.m. Miss I. Charley, chairman of the Public Health Section of the Royal College of Nursing, will speak on "The White Paper on the National Health Services" and the place of the nursing profession within it. Take 'bus 86 from Tunbridge Wells Central Station at 5.43 p.m. to Woodsgate Corner. A second meeting will follow on Friday, September 1, at 3 p.m., at the Kent and Sussex Hospital, by kind invitation of Miss Frere, matron. Representatives of each section of the profession within the Branch will present their suggestions and discussion will follow. On Saturday, September 30, at 6.30 p.m., in the Board Room, Kent and Sussex Hospital, Dr. Sidney Croskery, will give a lecture with lantern slides on "My Experiences in Arabia". On Friday November 10, at 2.45 p.m., Dr. E. A. Wharton will lecture on "Child Psychology". It is hoped that a discussion on "Bridging the Gap" may be arranged later

COMING EVENT

Chesterfield and North Derbyshire Royal Hospital

The annual presentation of medals, certificates and prizes will take place on Saturday, August 26 at 3.30 p.m., in the out-patients' department of the hospital. Mrs. H. M. Blair-Fish, S.R.N., joint secretary, Horder Committee on Nursing Reconstruction, will present the awards. No individual invitations are being sent to past members of the nursing staff, but all are cordially invited.

CANCELLATION

Owing to present circumstances the Central Council of Health Education has cancelled the Summer School in Health Education, which was to have taken place on August 9 to 19, at the Chelsea Polytechnic, S.W.3.

Well Done, Dorchester

STUDENT nurses of the Herrison Hospital, Dorchester, have raised £120 for the Student Nurses' Field Ambulance Fund.

In Parliament

On July 27, in the House of Commons, Mr. Foster enquired when the Report of the Rushcliffe Committee would be available respecting the new scale of salaries for mental nurses.

Mr. Willink, Minister of Health, said that he hoped to be able to make a statement on this matter on Thursday of next week, by which time he expected that the report would be available.

An Examination for the Roll of Queen's Nurses

1. What special forms of ill health may arise from bad housing? What ordinary facilities to safeguard health should be included in new housing schemes for families of limited incomes?

2. What are the differences in the symptoms of smallpox and chickenpox? What is the law regarding vaccination? How would you persuade a mother to have her baby vaccinated?

3. How would you prepare for a dressing following an operation for mastoid, the patient having been discharged from hospital? What special observations would you make and record?

4. What may be the causes of loss of weight in a baby of three months, and what advice would you give? At what age should a baby weigh double its weight at birth?

5. You are called to a family where three children are suffering from scabies. It is a rural area far from any treatment centre. What is the doctor likely to prescribe? What measures should be taken to prevent the spread of the disease?

6. (a) From what Government departments or other sources are the following paid and how can suitable persons apply for them: supplementary pension, disablement benefit, blind pension, widow's pension, old age pension?

or

(b) What do you understand by the following terms: tuberculosis dispensary, medical officer of health, maternal morbidity, vital statistics, infant mortality rate?

Questions 6a and 6b are alternative; only one should be answered.

FROM ALL QUARTERS

Plans in Glasgow

THE municipality of Glasgow is already planning a considerable extension of maternity beds in the hospitals under its control, and the health committee is to place before the Corporation a programme of development designed to provide a further 400. The present programme includes a unit of 150 beds instead of 50 at the Southern General Hospital; at the Robroyston Hospital a new unit to work in conjunction with the existing pavilions; and at Mearnskirk Hospital 100 beds, subject to the selection of a suitable site.

Rheumatism and Reconstruction

THE number of patients attending the out-patient clinics of the rheumatism unit at St. Stephen's Hospital, S.W.10, has increased from 944, in 1938, to 1,784, in 1943. An analysis in the medical officer's report of the patients attending during the last six months of 1943 shows that of 109 housewives with rheumatoid arthritis 61.0 per cent. are doing their normal duties, compared with 6 per cent. at work prior to the onset and treatment of rheumatism. These excellent figures are evidently the result of wide investigations by radiologist, pathologist, neurologist, psychiatrist and others, and the day-to-day care of nurses, almoners, physiotherapists and dietitians. The work of the unit, which contains thirty in-patients' beds and out-patients' facilities, that include evening clinics, is showing the importance of sociological conditions—occupation, diet and housing.

One Way Out

THE present tendency among landladies, and other householders, to refuse accommodation to mothers or expectant mothers is particularly noticeable in many Scottish areas, and is multiplying the work of mothercraft centres, which find much of their work handicapped by lack of co-operation from the civilian population. Speaking recently on this subject, Miss F. E. Sinclair Sutherland, matron of the Edinburgh Mothercraft Club stated: "The nation needs its babies. The Government is doing all that it can to ensure a healthy mother and baby, but the civilian population, which could help in this work, is standing back or directly hindering. A hostel for expectant mothers is a crying need and it would be full to capacity within a week". Few mothercraft centres have any residential accommodation, and the householder's point of view in taking in mothers and children, with a house already packed more or less to capacity is understandable even if it adds to a problem.

MORNING SICKNESS and DENTAL DECAY

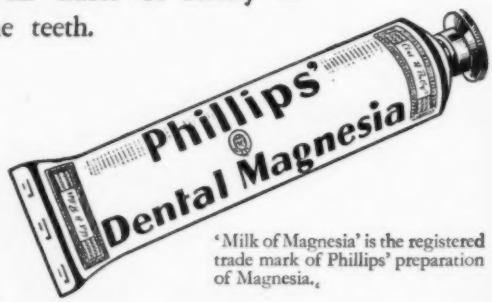
In the study of the etiology of dental decay, it has been proved that acidity in the mouth has a pathogenic action on the teeth. During pregnancy, therefore, and especially in cases where the vomiting of morning sickness is persistent, the patient should be advised to use only Phillips' Dental Magnesia. This dentifrice contains a high percentage of 'Milk of Magnesia', and because of its antacid properties it instantly neutralises all traces of acidity in the mouth and thus preserves the teeth.

Get Phillips' Dental Magnesia for your patient to-day. 1/1d. and 1/10½d. per tube.

Of all Chemists and Stores.



'Milk of Magnesia' is the registered trade mark of Phillips' preparation of Magnesia.
